

AGRICULTURE & FORESTRY

Van Ness Feldman has decades of multi-disciplinary experience representing the legal, regulatory, and market interests of individuals and businesses in the agriculture and forest industries. Clients include various industry coalitions and associations, private growers of agricultural products, vineyard operators and developers, and those involved in the irrigation and harvest of both natural and farmed resources.

Our attorneys and policy professionals have enjoyed strong relationships with individuals in the US Department of Agriculture (USDA) and the Foreign Agriculture Service, which handles international trade programs that are vital to the continued economic sustainment and growth of the agriculture industry. In addition, our team has particular experience with the appropriations process and is actively involved in the Administration's Promoting Agriculture and Rural Prosperity in America Executive Order which aims to protect the rural communities where food, fiber, forestry, and many of our renewable fuels are cultivated.
